- Messages from students

Opinionpanel has released a new report on graduates and the recession. The report states:

"Nearly half of the comments left by our graduates concerned them wanting employers to continue with recruiting graduates, even in this climate. They suggest recruiters should broaden their choice of target universities and the minimum degree class requirements they set, in order to gain a more diverse workforce. They advocate the expansion of work experience schemes/internships and wanted to be treated fairly when going through the recruitment process, for example getting a timely response from recruiters."
